

Sheng-Nan Lu MD,MPH, PhD

Chiayi Chang Gung Memorial Hospital
Taiwan

Sheng-Nan Lu, MD, MPH, PhD, is the vice-superintendent and clinical professor in the Division of Hepatogastroenterology, the Department of Internal Medicine at the Chiayi Chang Gung Memorial Hospital (CGMH). He is also adjunct professor at the Chang Gung University College of Medicine in Taoyuan, Taiwan.

Professor Lu graduated from the Kaohsiung Medical University (KMU) in 1984 and then completed a two-year Master course in Public Health (MPH) at the National Taiwan University. Following this, he received complete training of Internal Medicine and Gastroenterology at the KMU Hospital and became an attending physician in 1990, and was awarded a PhD degree by KMU in 1992. He moved to Kaohsiung CGMH in 1997, and to Chiayo CGMH in 2017.

Professor Lu has published more than 350 international papers with most being clinical and epidemiological studies of hepatitis and hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC). He is an Academic Editor of PLoS One and also serves as a Journal Referee of more than 50 peer-reviewed journals.

Professor Lu is the current President of the Taiwan Academy of Tumor Ablation (TATA), and a member of council in the Gastroenterology Society of Taiwan (GEST), Taiwan Association for the Study of Liver (TASL) and the Taiwan Liver Cancer Association (TLCA). He is the convenor of the Clinical Counseling Group for HCC of National Health Research Institutes, the director of epidemiology group in National Hepatitis C Program Office and a member of Committee for Liver Cancer and Hepatitis Prevention and Control, Minister of Health and Welfare, Taiwan.